

Leave the New Jersey Do-Not-Call Law alone! I am proud that my state holds the well-being of its residents in greater esteem than my federal government does. Isn't this a constitutional issue? All powers not specifically assigned to the federal government are, according to the Reserve Clause, state functions. I don't believe that telecommunications is listed in the US Constitution. The federal government has enough trouble, it seems, handling those powers specifically assigned to it: defense (sometimes interpreted as a good offense), etc. Please solve those problems before you meddle into those already solved by the states.
